ORIGIN OF TOWNSHIP NAMES IN ONTARIO

Many Names Commemorate Leaders in Political and Social Life of Great Britain

The first township of Ontario was named in honor of the reigning monarch, George III, in 1791. The townships were laid out for the accommodation of loyalists who came from the United States and Canada after the treaty of Versailles in 1763. The first land surveyed and divided was the St. Lawrence river, where there are to be found townships in Kingston, Elizabethtown, Pittsburg and Charlottetown. Available information would indicate that many of these names were given first to lower names and afterwards extended to the township level. In domestic history, Kingston is named (Catherine) in honor of the King.

The first motto of the modern name is in a letter signed by John Galt, Deputy Secretary General and dated, Quebec, July 7, 1796. The name of Kingston as a township designation is later. Collier mentions Elizabethtown and Pittsburg as being named under date July 7, 1796. The earliest reference to a township is in the name of Lake Victoria, (Glenora) county, in a letter dated June 18, 1796. A letter of the same date, June 18, 1796, is a letter from the same source, Kingston is named (Catherine) in honor of the King.
